Bio

I graduated from the University of Westminster in 2013 and moved to Paris shortly after where I spent a year working for Ogilvy & Mather's in-house studio. I launched my freelance career in 2014 and since then have had the pleasure of working with a broad international client base.

Experience

2013 - 2014

Ogilvy & Mather - Paris

Assistant Art Director March 2014 - September 2014
Creative Studio intern August 2013 - February 2014

Day to day work included Photoshop mock ups, design work, logo designs, storyboarding and moodboards. During my year at Ogilvy I created weekly illustrations to accompany posts on IBM's People for Smarter Cities blog, created a new logo for UK charity, Water for Africa and worked closely with a small creative team putting together a winning pitch presentation for Tiffany & Co, New York.

2014 - present

Freelance Designer, Illustrator & Animator

Working with international clients I contribute ideas, design, illustration and animation for advertising and editorial. During my time working freelance I have also produced personal projects gaining press from the likes of Adweek, Fast Company and Designboom.
